What Happens When an Engineer Practices OD: How to analyze the Organization as a System

Friday, August 11, 2017

Dr. Phillip Meade will share how to use systems thinking tools and techniques to improve the effectiveness of OD initiatives.

Following the tragic Space Shuttle Columbia accident, Phillip was asked to lead the cultural and organizational changes required for return to flight. This assignment started an engineer down a path of learning and discovery, ultimately culminating in the creation of an OD group at Kennedy Space Center. Along the way, he discovered how viewing the organization as a system could lead to better effectiveness of OD initiatives.

During this session, Phillip will share his journey and introduce you to tools from his engineering background which can be used to better understand organizations and design interventions.
